Chapter 131: The Clones of the Divine Triad

As the multiverse expanded and challenges grew increasingly complex, the Divine Triad relied on their ability to create clones—manifestations of their will and power—to ensure their influence stretched across all domains. These clones, while only a fraction of their original strength, held unfathomable power and were tasked with maintaining balance, governing realms, and protecting the fabric of existence.

Ashborn’s Clones: Masters of Balance

Ashborn, the Absolute Celestial Being, entrusted his clones with maintaining the equilibrium of light, darkness, and order across specific domains.

1. First Clone: Stationed in the Domain of the Apostles of God, this clone fostered the growth and power of the angelic beings. It acted as their leader and spiritual guide, ensuring the Apostles of God remained steadfast in their duties to uphold the forces of light and creation.

2. Second Clone: Positioned in the Domain of the Heavenly Soldiers, this clone managed the vast armies of winged warriors born from the fruits of the World Tree. It oversaw their training, strategy, and readiness to defend the multiverse.

3. Third Clone: Assigned to the Domain of the Dark Apostles, this clone represented Ashborn’s understanding of the necessity of darkness. It maintained order among the chaotic forces of the Dark Apostles, ensuring their destructive power was controlled and wielded with precision.

Each of Ashborn’s clones created inner worlds, emissaries, and vast armies within their realms, bolstering the forces of the Absolute Celestial Being.

Sung Jin-Woo’s Clones: Shadows of Dominion

Sung Jin-Woo, the Absolute Humanoid Being, created seven clones to govern key areas of the multiverse. Each clone held 0.05% of his immense power but was still a force unmatched by nearly all other beings.

1. First Clone: Deployed into the Abyss to combat the Constellations, enemies who sought to disrupt the balance of the multiverse.

2. Second Clone: Stationed on Earth, hidden among the S-Rank hunters, acting as a silent protector and observer.

3. Third Clone: Assigned to the Shadowverse Universe, the domain of the Shadowkins, maintaining order and ensuring their growth.

4. Fourth Clone: Resided in the Shadow Abyss, the domain of the Shadow Lords, reinforcing their allegiance and expanding their strength.

5. Fifth Clone: Positioned at the Palace of the Divine Legacy in the Sung Dynasty, acting as a guide and elder figure to manage historical and familial legacies.

6. Sixth Clone: Governed the Domain of the Heavenly Soldiers, strengthening their forces and preparing them for potential conflicts.

7. Seventh Clone: Stationed in the Domain of the Dark Apostles, ensuring their chaotic tendencies served the overarching balance of the multiverse.

Each of Jin-Woo's clones developed inner worlds and emissaries, harnessing time dilation to cultivate unimaginable power and forces.

Sung Su-Ho's Clones: Guardians of Draconic Flames

Sung Su-Ho, the Absolute Dragonic Being, created five clones, each strategically placed in realms where his fiery dominion was essential.

1. First Clone: Deployed into the Abyss, where it fought against threats posed by the Constellations. This clone's presence reinforced the Divine Triad's might in the chaotic void.

2. Second Clone: Stationed on Earth, blending among humans and protecting the planet as an unseen force.

3. Third Clone: Resided in Draconis Lux, the home of the Dragonkins, guiding their evolution and ensuring their loyalty.

4. Fourth Clone: Governed the Infernal Zenith, the fiery domain where his Fiery Dragon Lords thrived. This realm served as a fortress and training ground for his most destructive forces.

5. Fifth Clone: Operated from the Palace of the Divine Legacy, ensuring that the Sung Dynasty's legacy and power were upheld through the ages.

Like his counterparts, Su-Ho's clones developed inner worlds, creating emissaries and using the accelerated flow of time to cultivate realms, armies, and strategies.

Unity Through Multiplicity

Though the clones were distributed across various domains, they operated as an extension of the Divine Triad's will. Each clone acted autonomously but remained intrinsically linked to its creator, ensuring perfect synchronization in times of crisis.

The combined might of the clones, their inner worlds, and their emissaries ensured that no force in the multiverse could challenge the Divine Triad's dominion. Despite the vast power of the Divine Triad, it was their strategic deployment of clones that allowed them to govern the multiverse effectively, ensuring balance, order, and the continued existence of all realms.
